The firm of Paul B. Bailey offers a range of architectural preservation/restoration services. Recent work includes the adaptive reuse of the former St. Michael's School (c. 1920) in Hartford, Connecticut which won a 2008 Merit Award from the Connecticut Trust for Historic Preservation.

They have 23+ years of full architectural services and are a registered historical architect.

Vernon Town Hall

This historic c. 1889 town hall is a significant Richardsonian-Romanesque structure which originally contained a grand 35 foot high-ceilinged auditorium on the Third Floor. An adaptive reuse of this magnificent space included new City Council Chambers, offices for the Mayor, Town Manager and Treasurer and public gallery space. Also, the original windows of this 1889 structure, which were removed in 1975, were replaced by historically appropriate and energy efficient windows. When the restoration project, partially funded by the Connecticut Historic Commission, was completed in 2008, the third floor re-claimed its intended public use and a significant historic structure was returned to its former magnificence with sensitive design and contemporary materials and workmanship.
